Dallas County Celebrates Grand Opening of New Polk Street Clinic

Dallas (July 15, 2026) – Dallas County Commissioners Court and Dallas County Health and Human Services (DCHHS) proudly announce the grand opening of the Polk Street Clinic, expanding access to healthcare and supportive services for residents of Southwest Dallas County. Established to address health disparities caused by limited access to healthcare and other social determinants of health, the clinic represents Dallas County's continued investment in improving health outcomes by bringing essential healthcare and supportive services closer to the communities that need them most.

The public is invited to celebrate the grand opening on:

Wednesday, July 29, 2026 11:00 a.m. at 7201 S. Polk Street Dallas, Texas 75232

The clinic will be open Monday through Friday from 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Services available at the Polk Street Clinic include:

- Sexual Health Services
- Tuberculosis (TB) Services
- Immunizations
- Women's Health Services
- Chronic Disease Prevention
- Social Services

“The opening of the Polk Street Clinic reflects Dallas County's ongoing commitment to improving access to public health and essential community services to areas with the greatest need,” said Dr. Philip Huang, Director of DCHHS. “By bringing these services closer to where people live and work, we are helping create healthier communities and removing barriers to care.”

“The Polk Street Clinic is one of nine DCHHS clinic locations providing accessible, affordable, and preventive healthcare services throughout Dallas County. We are proud of our partnership with Oak Cliff Bible Fellowship. We are extremely proud of our partnership with Oak Cliff Bible Fellowship, and look forward to Oak Cliff Bible Fellowship programming services that complement Dallas County’s efforts and meet the needs of our residents. Dallas County cannot do this alone.” said Commissioner John Wiley Price.

DCHHS clinics are dedicated to providing accessible, low-cost, or no cost healthcare services to Dallas County residents.
