Why do you have to file with the DA's office?

IBC cases must be brought to trial in the Justice of the Peace Precinct where either the offense took place or the defendant resides. In the past it has been very convenient, efficient, and effective, for merchants and other victims of the offense of Issuance of Bad Check, to file directly with the office of the Justice of the Peace where the case has to be tried. However, if the complaint originates in the office of the District Attorney, the DA can add an additional fee to the defendant's fine that directly benefits the office of the District Attorney, as allowed by the Texas Code of Criminal Procedure. When the complaint originated in the office of the Justice of the Peace Court, this fee could neither be assessed nor collected.

In 2005, the Texas legislature passed a new law, for only Dallas and Harris Counties, requiring that IBC complaints must now originate with the District Attorney's office in their respective counties. If the case goes to trial, it must still go to the Justice of the Peace Precinct where either the offense took place or the defendant resides.

Therefore, after September 1, 2005, for Dallas and Harris Counties only, all complaints for the offense of Issuance of Bad Check (IBC) must originate in the office of the District Attorney (DA). These cases can no longer originate in the office of the nearby Justice of the Peace.
